

I was born in Mexico City to a family of doctors. It was always instigated in me that the success in life comes through knowledge and hard work. I was lucky to grow up surrounded by adults, which taught me to be responsible for my decisions and actions since an early age.

At age 17, I moved by myself to Minnesota to finish high school and lived in Quebec briefly during the university. I believe that living in different countries has given me the ability to see and understand diverse ways of living and thinking.

I have a bachelor's degree in International Affairs with a specialization in International Politics and post-graduate studies in Marketing. I started working when I was 21 years old teaching English as a second language while I finished my major. From there I began working in the pharmaceutical industry, where I remained for over 16 years as Marketing Manager.

When my husband and I decided to move to Oregon, we wanted to start a new life with new careers, and real estate was our choice. I have been in a real estate agent since 2017. When I started, I did not know this would be the most rewarding profession I could have chosen.

I strongly believe that there is point in everyone's life when we need to start giving back and helping others the way we were helped by our families, friends and peers. Which brought me to participate in NAHREP's board of directors and volunteer in the Professional Development Key Committee of the Oregon Association of Realtors. And also, why I applied to be a director in MVAR. I feel that I can bring all my knowledge and experience to MVAR to continue building a better quality of life for all.
